

TOURISM CONCERN

£5,696

Tourism Concern has always taken a 'development' view of tourism since tourism fails to benefit people in third world countries. They work closely, as advocates, with people living in the South. Funds were sought for outreach work to raise awareness amongst the holiday-going public on how to be a responsible tourist.

The TFN grant was instrumental in Tourism Concern receiving further funding from the Department for International Development for an exciting new action with Black and Minority Ethnic(BME) organisations in the UK to eradicate racism from tourism. They have also continued their outreach work attending exhibitions, fairs and festivals along with talking to local groups about responsible tourism. Tourism Concern's Outreach project supported by TFN continues to raise awareness amongst holidaymakers of the impacts tourism brings to poorer countries and also shows how to be a more responsible traveller.
